COLD-BLOODED MURDER IN RICHMOND MONDAY

Brack Maupin Shoots James Farris
To Death on Street and Then
Cuts His Throat

Richmond, Ky., Oct. 7.—Brack Maupin, one of the best-known farmers in Madison county shot and killed James Farris, of Lawrenceburg, here this morning. After Farris had fallen with three bullets in his body, Maupin in his madness sprang onto his victim with a pocket knife and besides cutting his throat from ear to ear, stabbed him in several places before bystanders could get him off. Farris' death was apparently instantaneous.

Maupin immediately surrendered to officers and was allowed to stay in the jail corridor under guard of his friends.

He would not make a statement for the press, but the trouble is understood to be the result of an old grudge.

The dead man formerly lived in this county, where he owns a large farm near Kingston, but moved to Lawrenceburg some years ago, where he had been engaged in the revenue service.

Lincoln County Man Describes The Murder as he Saw It.

Several Lincoln county men who were in Richmond, Monday, which was court day there, saw the killing. For a while the report was current here that the man killed was former Senator George Farris, of Lancaster, who is now special messenger for Governor McCreary at Frankfort. But this report was soon found to be untrue.

Wm. Maupin, of the Dripping Springs section, and who says he is a second cousin of the man who did the killing, returned to Stanford from Richmond on the 2:40 train, and gave a full description of the unfortunate affair, of which he was an eye witness. He said that he did not personally know Brack Maupin, but knew him to be his cousin. He described the tragedy to a group of interested listeners when he got off the train here. Mr. Maupin said:

"I was standing near the livery stable just this side of the court house, when I heard Brack Maupin, who was standing near me, say 'There he goes now. I guess this is about as good a chance as I will have to get him.' With this remark, he ran his hand into his hip pocket and pulled out a pistol, breaking it to see if it was loaded. He walked up behind the man who I was afterward told, was named Farris, and jerked him around. Farris threw up his hands and exclaimed:

"For God's sake don't kill me Brack!"

"However, Brack's only reply was to pull the trigger and shoot Farris once in the chest. Farris then started to run, and Brack fired again four times at his back. Farris fell to the pavement, and Maupin then went up to him, and looked at him and said 'I may not have finished you, so I'll just make sure of it,' and with that he jerked a knife out of his pocket and jabbed the blade through Farris' throat."

"There was a big crowd on the streets, and four policemen quickly went after Brack Maupin. He fought them off with the butt of his revolver, and got away from two of them, while trying to reload his pistol, but they were too many for him, and overpowered him."

"There was a big crowd on the streets, and I reckon as many as two or three hundred people who were in that part of Richmond at the time must have seen the killing. The intense excitement prevailed for a while after the killing, as few were able to discover what the trouble between the men had been. I know nothing of the trouble between them; in fact I had known neither, although cognizant of the fact that Brack Maupin was my second cousin."

The Maupins are said to be a large and influential family in that section, and it is said will make a hard fight to get Brack Maupin out of the trouble. Just what the old grudge between him and Farris was, has not been cleared up yet, but it is said to date back ten or twelve years, to the time when Farris lived in Madison, and it is reported that the two men had some disagreement over a boundary fence.

Embry's pen of Buff Orpingtons were also third, laying 290 eggs to 381 for the winner and 327 for the second pen. Both pens made excellent showings, all things considered. The Crab Orchard church was greatly enthused and awakened by the splendid meeting. A large number of people witnessed the baptismal ceremony.

High School News.

(By James Cooner.)

Mr. Ewalt Givens '15 was absent from school a few days last week on account of sickness.

The first month of our school this term has passed, and much has been accomplished in our room and just as much in each one of the grades. Societies of all kinds have been formed, and many new things have been added to our school. The sanitary drinking cups which have been placed in each room recently are useful as well as healthful. Our school will always welcome any patrons who wish to come and see for themselves the new additions to our school.

Miss Maude Arnold, '16 was out of school some last week.

Miss Elizabeth Hann and Miss Bessie Brackett both of class '16, did not attend school for a day or two last week.

A merry crowd walked out to Miss Verna Rott's home last Friday night, and enjoyed themselves very much. Miss Rott is the hostess of many entertainments and each one is enjoyed more than the former one.

The first meeting of the Debating Society was held last Friday and it was fully enjoyed by each member. The society was opened by a short speech from the president, Mr. Joseph Hill, '13, followed by the reading of the minutes by the secretary, Miss Josephine Carpenter, '14. Mr. Ireland acted as judge of the debates.

The subject of the debate was:

"Resolved that Longfellow was a Greater Writer than Tennyson. Miss Annie Milburn was the first debater on the affirmative side, while Miss Ella Warren was the first on the negative side. Then Mr. William Grimes spoke as the second affirmative followed by Mr. Clinton Coleman on the negative side. Mr. Thomas Coleman was the third affirmative and Miss Marion Grimes third negative. Miss Sallie M. Craig was the last speaker on the affirmative and Mr. Harry Reinhart was the last on the negative side. Mr. Ireland's decision was the negatives, 14 points and the affirmatives 10. All the debates were good, and enjoyed by all.

The Literary Society was called to order at 2:30 on last Friday afternoon by President Jesse Hoeker. The roll having been called the whole society sang America. We were then favored with a recitation by the talented Miss Gertrude Gaines. The musical numbers of the program were all enjoyed. The debate: Resolved that Immigration is detrimental to the U. S. was not quite as interesting as it would have been if one of the contestants had not been absent, consequently no judges were appointed. A few visitors were present at our opening program.

There was an excursion at High Bridge Sunday and Powell had gone down with a party from Wilmore. He was on the edge of the precipice when he suddenly fell backward. ## To Urge Phillips Bros

To Complete Concrete Pavements
At a meeting of the city council Thursday night considerable routine business was transacted and a committee was appointed to urge the completion of the concrete pavements by Phillips Bros. It is hoped that they will get busy and finish up the work as the torn up pavements cause much inconvenience to pedestrians and give the town a most unsightly appearance. And, too, cold weather is not far off and it might get too cold to do the work before spring, if they do not get a move on themselves.

Enjoyed Chestnut Hunt.

Some twenty-five or thirty members of the eighth grade of the Stanford Graded School spent Saturday chestnut hunting in the Coffey school-house section. They all went out in a two-horse wagon and spent the day most enjoyably. Each of the young people took a lunch and when all the lunches were put into one big one it was a repast fit for the Gods! ## GARRARD YOUNG MAN DIES OF HYDROPHOBIA

Ed S. Elam Scratched or Bitten By Negro And Develops Rabies.
Physicians Say.

Ed S. Elam, a prominent young farmer of the Spainey section, of Garrard county, died at his home Sunday morning, of what many of the physicians who saw him diagnosed as a virulent case of hydrophobia. The young man is said to have been bitten or scratched by a negro in an altercation in which the two became engaged at the farm of Dave Dudderar, near the Lincoln county line, about two weeks ago. Little attention was paid to the injury at the time.

About a week ago, however, the early symptoms of rabies developed, it is said, though the physicians did not at the time suspect that it was such, merely thinking that the young man was developing a heavy fever. When it was too late to give the Pasteur treatment, it was recognized as rabies, and the death of the young man is said to have removed all doubt as to the character of the ailment of which he was a victim.

Calvin Elam, a brother of the unfortunate boy, was killed by a live wire in Paris a short time ago.

Young Elam was just 21 years of age and was well esteemed and liked by all who knew him. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Elam. The affair with the negro farm hand is said to have been a trifling affair, and nothing was thought of it at the time. When he first became sick, it was thought that he was suffering from a severe fever, and he was given every attention by the physicians called and the most careful of nursing. When the infection became fully developed, a number of the physicians still thought that it was a sort of blood poisoning, but the most of them diagnosed it as an undoubted attack of rabies. Several Lancaster physicians were informed of the symptoms by their brethren of Lancaster, and say that from what they were told they believe that young Elam was the victim of rabies.

The funeral of the young man was held from the family residence Monday afternoon, with interment in the Goshen cemetery. The parents have the sympathy of a large number of friends in their grief.

MRS. LANE FINED $300

Danville Woman Who Killed her Husband Gets Off Easy.

Danville, Ky., Oct. 5.—The jury trying Mrs. Helen Lane for the killing of her husband brought in a verdict Saturday afternoon, fixing a fine of $300 against her. Guilty of manslaughter was the verdict returned by the jury.

Lane secured a divorce from a former wife at Somerset on the morning before the killing, and the killing and the trouble that led to his death came up over the discovery of the Mrs. Lane at Somerset on the part of Mrs. Lane in Danville. Nine of the jurors stood for acquittal and three for a penitentiary sentence at first.

Mrs. Lane told her story on the stand Friday night. In an effort to support herself when she first came to Danville, she had sold silverware about the city, canvassing from house to house. Later she rented the little cottage on Beatty avenue near Beddow's restaurant and engaged in taking roomers as a means of earning a living. Last April Charles Lane took a room with her. He soon proceeded to make love to his landlady, and in June they were united in marriage in Lexington.

All the while Lane had another wife at Somerset, to whom he was married eight years ago and with whom he lived only two days. She filed suit for divorce upon his marriage to his last wife and when the sheriff of Boyle county served a summons on him to appear in the Pulaski circuit court, he told his last wife that he owed some old costs at Somerset and would have to go there and settle same. While there his Somerset wife secured a divorce.

Upon his return to Danville he told Mrs. Lane they would have to be married again. He further told her that he had just gotten a divorce from his other wife at Somerset and that as a matter of fact they had never been legally married. This enraged Mrs. Lane and she declared she would take her marriage certificate to Lawyer Harding and see what could be done. Then Lane cursed and abused her, according to her story, and threatened to kill her. He was trying to take the pistol away from her when she shot him. Both Mrs. Lane and Mr. Lane used very vile epithets. She claimed that she was compelled to kill Lane to save her own life and to protect her honor and virtue.
